

Fatawa and Specialization

17. Fatawa and Arbitration Centre (Darul-Ifta)

A fatwa center has been established for the religious needs of people, for guidance in their families, as well as for social and business affairs. Apart from fatwas dealing with personal issues, the muftis at Binoria provide an extremely valuable service of resolving domestic disputes through religious counseling and arbitration.

These concern family law issues like divorce and inheritance. Services are provided in person and online.

Online Fatawa Service

An online fatwa facility has been launched which caters to the queries of Muslims from across the globe on a daily basis.

It is worth mentioning here that this is the first unique online service in the world so far, from where a fatwa is issued on the letterhead of a fatwa dar al-ifta scanned with a regular signature and seal, and sent to the questioner.

Fatawa App

Binoria has a social media presence and has even launched a fatwa application for smartphones. This app helps all those having religious queries to get a scanned copy of the fatwa on their phones.

18. Specialization in Jurisprudence (Hanafi)

Specialization in either of the two more popular schools of jurisprudence (Hanafi and Shafi) is available. The course involves intense readings of classical fiqh manuals along with exercises and discussions on the formulation of fiqh responses to modern problems. The aim is to produce specialists in Islamic jurisprudence who can cater to the religious needs of the people and also help the courts of the country in an advisory capacity.

Features and Objectives

The course involves intensive studies in Islamic law. This involves various fiqh exercises, additional and supporting courses, and in-depth study of fiqh problems. The objective is to produce experts in Islamic law who are able to solve the various practical problems concerning the implementation of fiqh faced by people in various fields. The graduates may also get involved in helping the government in all areas of Islamic law being implemented in Pakistani law.

Courses with a view to the above are:

1. Adjudication and Arbitration
2. Islamic Banking and Insurance
3. Astronomy and Geography
4. Halal Awareness
5. English

20. Specialisation in Jurisprudence (Fiqh ul Halal)

This department seeks to fulfill the need and demands of consumers for vetting food and other products for being halal. The aim is to develop a system whereby Binoria can work with registered government institutions and authorities to issue halal certifications for all consumer products. With the increase in imports of all kinds of food and other products. The need for such vetting and halal certification has been greatly felt and Binoria seeks to fulfill this demand through cooperation with the government and other institutions.

21. Specialisation in Fiqh Al- Malia (Islamic Commercial Law)

With the increase in trade, people have regularly had recourse to JBA to seek guidance concerning commercial transactions. Even with commonplace business transactions, people are increasingly turning to madrasahs for rulings as per fiqh. The specialization course in Islamic commercial law at Binoria seeks to address this need, giving guidance on transactions that can be rectified and presenting alternate Shariah-compliant modes in other cases. The aim is to produce specialists in commercial law who can give rulings on commercial matters and also increase awareness concerning principles of Islamic law among the public through seminars and dialogues with other private and government entities.

Al-Iman Shariah Consultancy

Keeping the above in view, the al-Iman Shariah Consultancy was established which works under the supervision of both muftis and experts from the business community. Research is conducted and rulings are provided for newer business problems. The consultancy caters to HR, marketing, risk management, takaful, mudaraba, mutual funds and problems arising in different trade categories. The consultancy keeps in close contact with the business community to better understand modern commercial issues.

22. Specialisation in Fiqh for Women

A special one-year-long course was established in 2021 for women graduates who complete the aalima course offered at Binoria. The course seeks to fulfill the needs of women who may feel hesitant discussing personal fiqh issues with male muftis. Entrance to the course is very selective, limited to women graduates who have also had a modern education.

The specially designed syllabus includes exercises and training in giving rulings (ifta) as well as additional courses such as the Islamic law of inheritance on the focus of Muslim personal law.
